CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT A – ARGUMENT IN FAVOR
Voting for Amendment A will increase the fairness of an existing property tax exemption for active duty military members.

The Utah Constitution already allows a property tax exemption for an active duty service member’s home if the member is deployed on active duty service outside the state for 200 consecutive calendar days or for 200 days in a calendar year. However, some members of the military serve on active duty on non-consecutive days that do not align to a calendar year.

Amendment A will increase fairness to all active duty members by amending the constitution to allow a military member to receive a one-year property tax exemption for the member’s home each time the member serves on active duty outside the state for at least 200 days within any 365-day period.
